I want to disable a specific compiler warning with nvcc, specifically. warning: NULL reference is not allowed. The code I am working on uses NULL references are part of SFINAE, so they can't be avoided.. An ideal solution would be a #pragma in just the source file where we want to disable the warnings, but a compiler flag would also be fine, if one exists to turn off only the warning in question. 0.11 — Configuring your compiler: Warning and error levels ... Treat warnings as errors. It is also possible to tell your compiler to treat all warnings as if they were errors (in which case, the compiler will halt compilation if it finds any warnings). This is a good way to enforce the recommendation that you should fix all warnings (if you lack self-discipline, which most of us do).
